"AGRICULTURE - Science and Practice Journal" has been published since 1992, being in its 30th year (1992-2021). The journal is published by the University of Agricultural Sciences and Veterinary Medicine, in collaboration with the Romanian Society of Organic Agriculture and research and development units in all branches of agriculture, located in the area of influence of the university.

In editorial "At the beginning of the road", from the first number of the magazine (in 1992), I showed that this publication "is a forum from which up-to-date science in the field of agriculture will be preached" ....., pleading for the orientation of this editorial in promoting organic farming.

In that editorial (since 1992) we put in evidence the fact that ecological guidelines in agriculture refer to "the rational integration of modern technologies in a systemic vision, following the relationships of interdependence between phenomena over time and their effect on production and environmental quality." In the years of publication appearance, the magazine made known the principles and elements of organic agriculture, in order to promote them in the agricultural practice of our country. The quality of published scientific papers and their presentation were improved year by year.

On the occasion of this anniversary event, three decades after the establishment of the magazine "Agriculture", I congratulate all those who contributed to founding these magazine and make her modern, all contributors and readers of this publication; university teachers, scientific researchers and practitioners in the fields of agriculture, those who promote in our country a thriving and sustainable agriculture.

We wish our publication "Agriculture - Science and Practice Journal" many years, with scientific papers of high quality and practical value, with productive technological solutions, economical and non-polluting, in order to prevent environmental damage and crop impairment, ensuring the health of the population and nature. We wish our publication to contribute to the affirmation of the national agricultural science, to the development and modernization of agriculture in our country.
